Math Department Chair

- Do you love math with a passion and not only want others to share that passion but have demonstrated an ability to stir up that same passion in others?
- Do you see math as more than just a means to a STEM career but as a liberal “freeing” art that all educated people should enjoy and understand and not just suffer through?
- Do you enjoy math history and the people, intellectual history and development behind math?
- Do you see great beauty in math and want others to experience that as well?
- Do you have a knack for making complex concepts clear to others in a step by step fashion?
- Do you love teaching relatively small groups of bright and capable students who are eager to learn?
- Would you benefit from a community of faith and learning that embodies both academic rigor and spiritual depth, with a high caliber of colleagues and conversation regarding the integration of math across multiple disciplines?

If so, there is an exciting opportunity for you at The Cambridge School. We are seeking an outstanding department chair and teacher for our K-12 mathematics program for the 2017-2018 academic year. The department chair will manage and coach teachers, oversee and refine curriculum decisions, and work in conjunction with the K-6 math specialist to coordinate a vertically aligned math as a liberal arts program. With a curriculum already developed, this position will also entail 10-15 hours of classroom teaching per week at a school that is equipping students to know, love, and practice that which is true, good, and beautiful and preparing them to live purposefully and intelligently in service of God and neighbor.

Successful candidates will agree wholeheartedly with our Mission and Statement of Faith, be skilled in teaching mathematics and will value the opportunity to inspire young learners in small classroom settings. A master’s or other advanced degree is required, and two years’ teaching experience at the secondary level and familiarity with Singapore math are preferred.
